PASADENA: Its Early Years

Los Angeles, a city at least twelve times larger in population than Pasadena, filed five hundred forty-nine subdivision maps in the years 1886-1887. Pasadena in the same period recorded four hundred thirty-three maps. Of course the area included Altadena to the north and Lamanda Park on the east, both of which were outside of Pasadena proper but were close enough to be considered part of it in those expanding times. As real estate activity gathered momentum, the attention of all Southern California became focused on Pasadena. What was happening in the little village was incredible. In the middle of 1886 the Riverside Echo noted with astonishment, "Lots one mile from the center of town in Pasadena are selling at $1,000 to $1,500. Ye gods and little fishes!" A year later the lots might well have sold at three times those figures. There appeared to be no ceiling.

Almost everyone was speculating in land and "making money handover-fist." The local paper entered into the spirit wholeheartedly. Very early in the first year of the boom a visitor to Pasadena inadvertently sent an undershirt to a laundry with one thousand dollars sewn in the lining. The Union drew a moral from this. "Put your money to soak in real estate rather than in a Chinese wash-house." People didn't need encouragement, they were already putting their money in real estate.
News that a lucky man bought a lot for three hundred dollars on Fair Oaks Avenue and in two years sold it for ten thousand five hundred dollars was good to hear. Most transactions were made in shorter periods of time. It was not uncommon for a person to purchase property and sell it at a substantial increase the same day. Stories of quick profits made fine copy for newspapers everywhere and people reading of the wild speculations would sometimes visit Pasadena to see at first hand the madness only to find themselves joining in.

It was not long before some ingenious men developed a rather novel method of real estate trading. H. W. Magee has explained how speculation was brought to perfection:

The real estate speculators, during the rapid rise in values and prices, after having mapped and priced their subdivisions, would call in their price lists put out the previous day and would double the prices previously fixed. This was a very shrewd move and highly successful.

Illustrative of this plan, a syndicate was formed (purely speculative) to purchase and sell lands. It would buy ten acres of land, and before noon on the day of the purchase, it would produce a map showing the lots and the prices fixed. This map would be passed into the hands of agents, and by evening of the same day all the lots would be marked as sold. Then the new purchasers, if not too many, would be called into a meeting with the first owners, and induced to surrender their purchase contracts and join with the original owners in raising prices one hundred percent or more; new maps the next day would be handed out and the lands sold again at the advanced prices.

In some cases, in less than sixty days, prices were advanced more than five hundred percent over the values first fixed.

=NINE

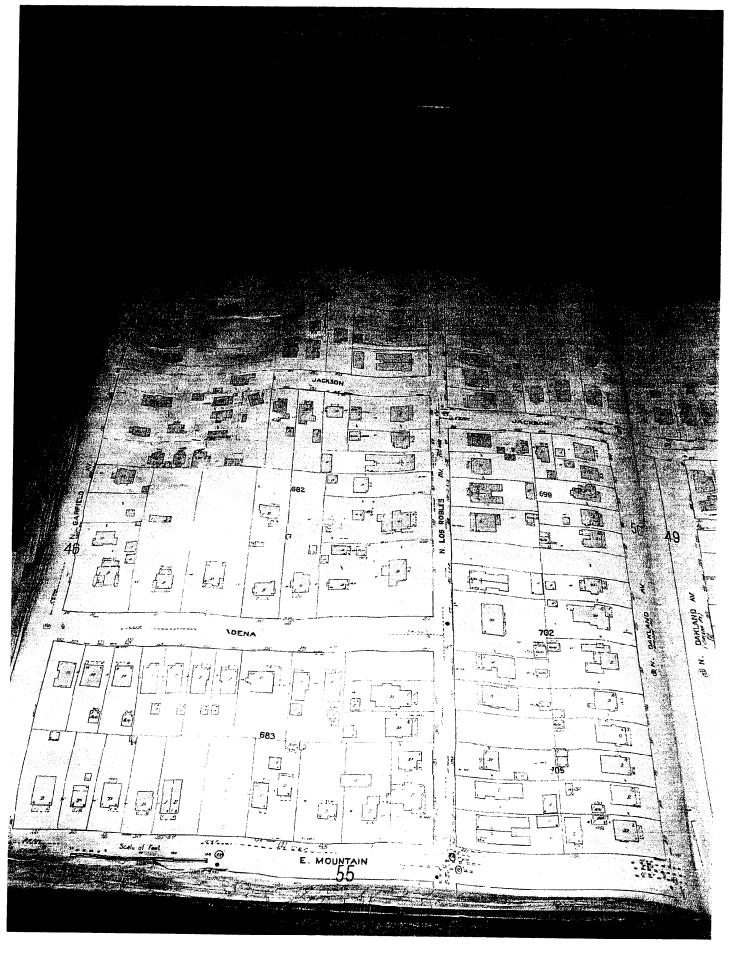

A TENDENCY TOWARD INSOLVENCY

=1888-1890=

T IS DIFFICULT to place the exact date when the great real estate boom collapsed since contemporary accounts refused to acknowledge for some time after the bottom fell out of the market that anything serious was wrong. The national economy was still in an active and prosperous state, and the trouble stemming from the unprecedented speculative frenzy was confined to Southern California. Property sales did not stop abruptly on a given date, although by March of 1888 prices had fallen to a very low level. During the spring and summer numerous sales were made by owners who, feeling that the bottom was yet to be reached, tried to salvage at least part of their investment. The sellers' assumptions were correct and they helped depress the market even farther in their anxiety to unload. Subdivision advertisements disappeared from the local and Los Angeles newspapers and the frequent mention of dull times was usually softened with forecasts of better days ahead. In Pasadena perhaps the first printed indication that all was not well appeared in the Valley Union on February 7, 1888. The article stated in part:

The Recorder's Court [Police Court] has been crowded with attachment cases of late, there having been a tendency toward insolvency or to avoid creditors on the part of several firms.

Construction activity in the last few months of 1887 slowed down. Most of the buildings started prior to the collapse were completed. An anxious eye was kept on the progress of construction, and any cessation of work from whatever cause was looked into immediately. Naturally, at first a feeling of great uneasiness prevailed but this gave way, at least in some quarters, to an undertone of genuine relief that the speculative mania was over. The group of men who were, no doubt, the happiest over the change in the trend were the bankers. The leaders in this field had been preaching, mostly to deaf ears, about the evils of real estate gambling for a long time. While in handling their personal affairs they did not always follow their own advice, as a group they ran their banks in an admirable fashion considering the difficult times. H. W. Magee, president of the San Gabriel Valley Bank, said in his memoirs:

THE ADENA MANSION

A celebration of this old beauty

That is in this brochure?

- Welcome
- The Adena Mansion
- Some tidbits about Adena Street
- The cast of characters

welcome to our landmark celebration.

he Adena Street members of the Garfield Heights Association welcome you to the Garfield Heights Home Tour. The entire association is especially proud of this community and cherishes the historic significance of many of the dwellings located within and near our geographical area. We hope that you too will enjoy the hidden beauty that is to be found here.

Garfield Heights' Grand Lady-The Adena Mansion

The Adena Mansion is the oldest home in the Garfield Heights area. She stands tall and proud looming silently above the intersection of Adena Street and Garfield Avenue. Built in the late 1880's, the mansion has been a source of pride for the community for many years. Of course, school age children have thirlled themselves with stories of the house being haunted. They can still be seen standing outside its gates staring up the driveway waiting for the slightest reason to go scurrying up the street giggling and gasping for breath. There is something about large old wood frame houses that provides ample material for our imaginations when young. However, what the children found to be daunting, the adults discovered to be enchanting.

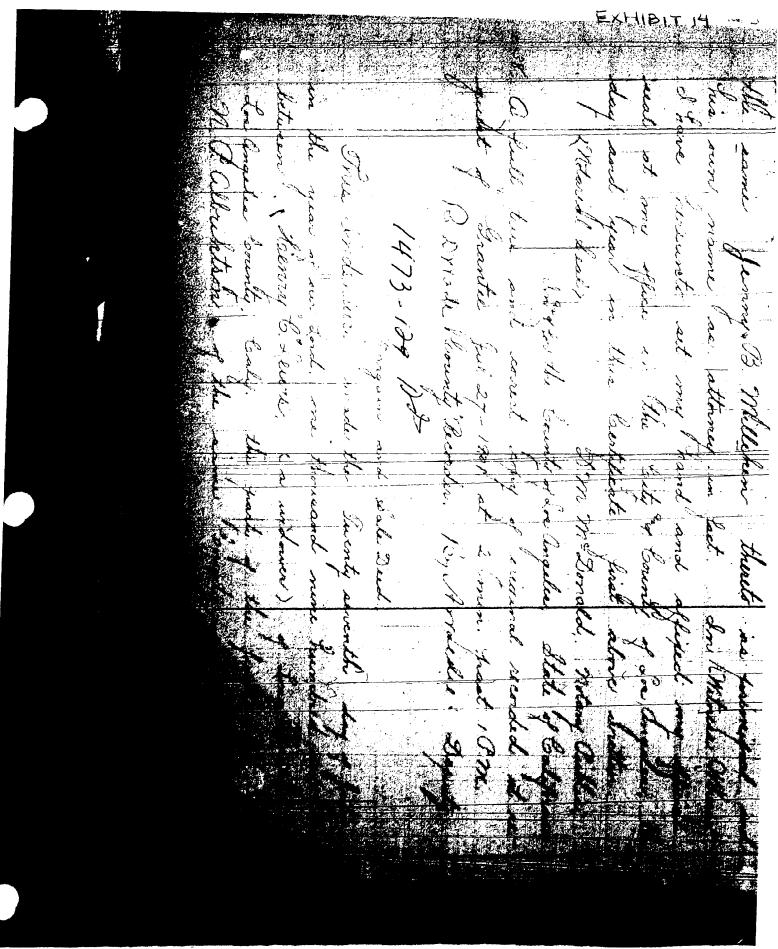

Over the years there have been many owners, but the longest resident, (known affectionately as Mrs. Jennings) sold the home last August. After having lived in the dwelling since 1960, she moved away in order to be near her family.

While new owner Camilla Carr has opened her beloved residence to the public on a grand scale, Mrs. Jennings would give a tour to anyone interested in seeing the Victorian-era mansion. Neighbors loved having the opportunity to view the "Grand Lady" from the inside.

Records vary with respect to the actual date of when the home was built, ranging between 1886 - 1889 Eugene Getschell, an early Pasadena architect, designed the home for Henry and Anna Lewis. Mr. Lewis was a retired farmer from Iowa They had four children and lived in the home until 1894. The old mansion has always had a retaining wall surrounding the property. Early pictures show that the wall was originally constructed of the stone (most likely the local Arroyo rock used widely throughout Pasadena).

The house has six fireplaces, however, it wasn't until craftsman Steve Copper began restoration on the home that the sixth fireplace was discovered. Up until that time it had remained hidden behind a wall. The large porches were designed for lounging not to mention providing a wonderful place for the family to sit and enjoy the view. Of course, this was long before the planting of trees and before they reached maturity. On rare occasions it was possible to catch a glimpse of the ocean from the tower. The porticos on the second and third floors provided the early residents with plenty of fresh air, as well as views of the mountains and the valley.

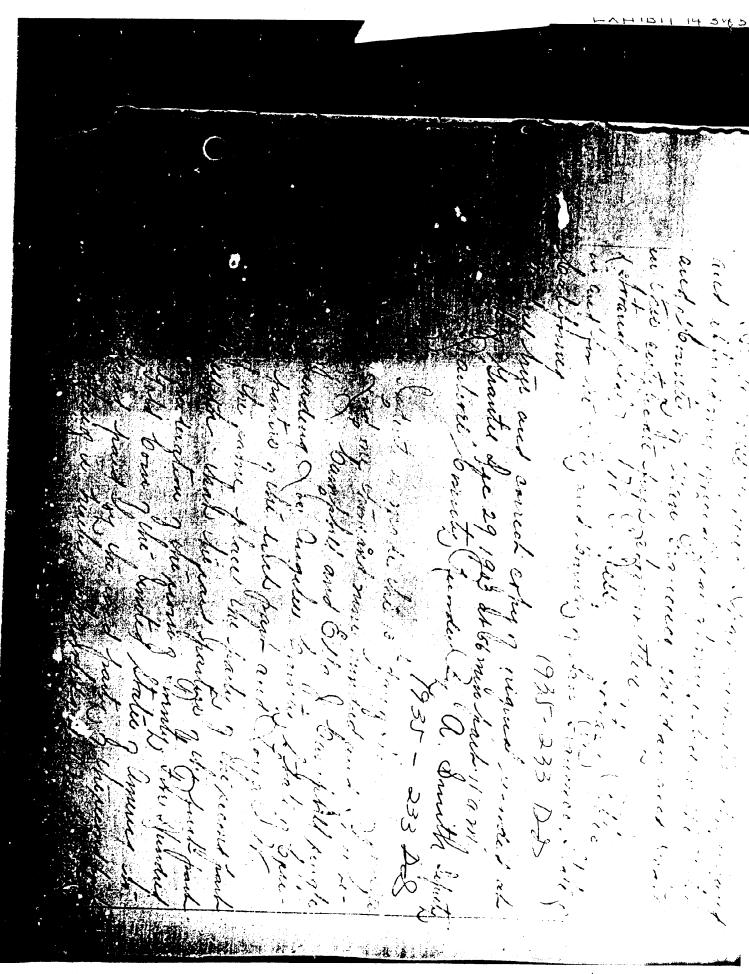

The Adena Mansion sits on a parcel of land that is part of Block R of the Painter and Ball Tract. In July of 1887 Dr. R. K. Janes created a subdivision bearing his name which included both sides of Adena Street. The street was so name after Dr. Janes' wife It is interesting to note the existence of an ancient tribe of North American Indians also known as the Adenas. They lived in what is now known as southern Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia, and possibly Pennsylvania. We do not know whether Mrs. Janes' was named after the Adena Indians and only mention the ancient tribe in passing.

at the same price. This concession, however, was afterward extended k others, and under it lands were bought the same year at the same price k. David Townsend, 30 acres; John Lowe, 20 acres: A. Ninde, 20 acres. P. G. Wooster, 10 acres.

Thomas Banbury gives a little different version of the matter from the Hollingsworth people. He says the low price of the lands sold in 1876 we conditioned on their "making up a pot," as Mr. Wilson expressed it, a 200 acres; and that the total sales that year, including his first 10 taken in December, 1875, amounted to 210 acres—so Mr. Wilson was satisfied, as the "full pot" had been made up.

These purchases, and the occupancy and improvements which wer forward in rapid succession, had now given the "east side colony" as it was called, a good start; and the price of Company lands, with water, we thereafter held at $75, $50 and $100 per acre.

The work of getting a water supply down to these lots now had to a pushed as rapidly as possible. The original ditch was enlarged and extended down to Reservoir No. 1, and finally cemented from Devil's Gate to the reservoir. Of course all this took time: and for several months the "easieders" had no water supply but what flowed in a plow-furrow ditch from the reservoir site down through the body of land they had chosen. The the gophers would often push fresh loose dirt into the stream and muddy in or make their holes where the water would all run into them and disappear leaving none for the new comers above ground; and occasionally hogs were found wallowing in the ditch where it crossed the old ranch lands up near the Arroyo. These were some of the tribulations of pioneer life in Pasadems It was the daily business of the settlers to go with their canteens, buckets barrels, tubs, etc., to the ditch and secure a supply of water for the day, or longer. Dr. Allen tells that, having no horse, he had to roll his water barrel back and forth by hand, a distance of half a mile from house to ditch

The construction and cementing of the permanent main ditch was done by Thomas Banbury under contract, superintended by Hon. J. De Bartle Shorb, who relates with much satisfaction that two distinguished U. S. army engineers, Gen. B. S. Alexander and Col. Geo. H. Mendel, estimated that it would cost at least $5 per running foot, but he built it at a cost a little under $2.75 per running foot. The cement or lime for this job was dug out of the hillside at Lincoln Park by Thomas Banbury, and burned there, where the Mission Fathers had done the same thing asearly as 1780-81. In constructing this cement ditch there was a certain point where a pike or causeway had to be made some distance across a depression in the land. Mr. Short and his engineer, named E. T. Wright, had set the stakes for this and A. O. Bristol had charge of a gang of Chinamen doing the grade work. One day John W. Wilson reported to his uncle B. D. Wilson down at his Lake Vineyard home, that there was something not right about that ditch

DESIGN III.

Costing $1,000.

FRONT ELEVATION.

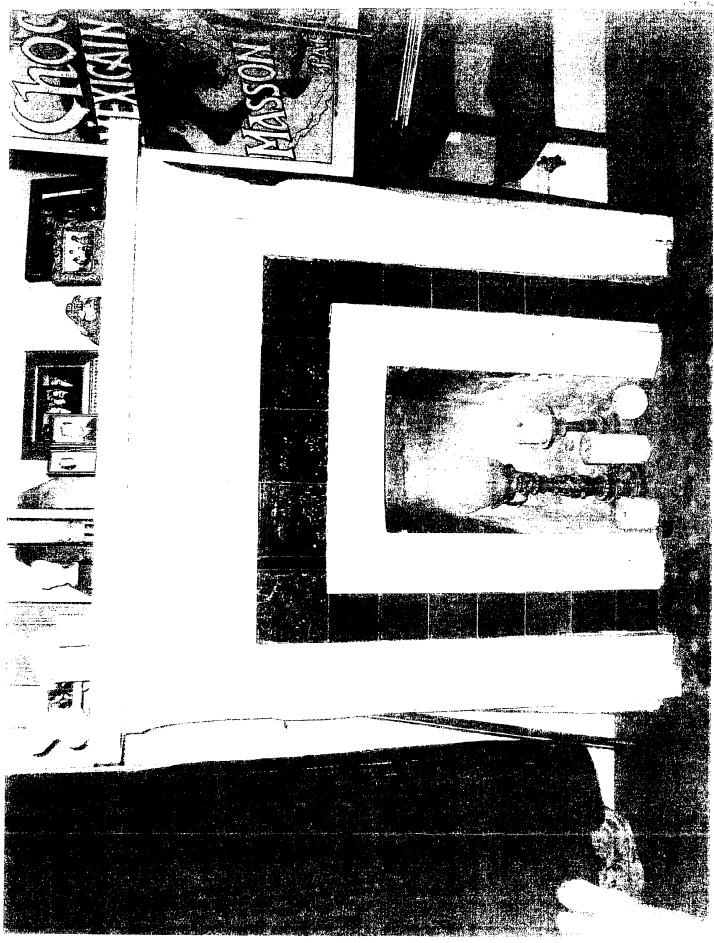

PEEKSKILL.

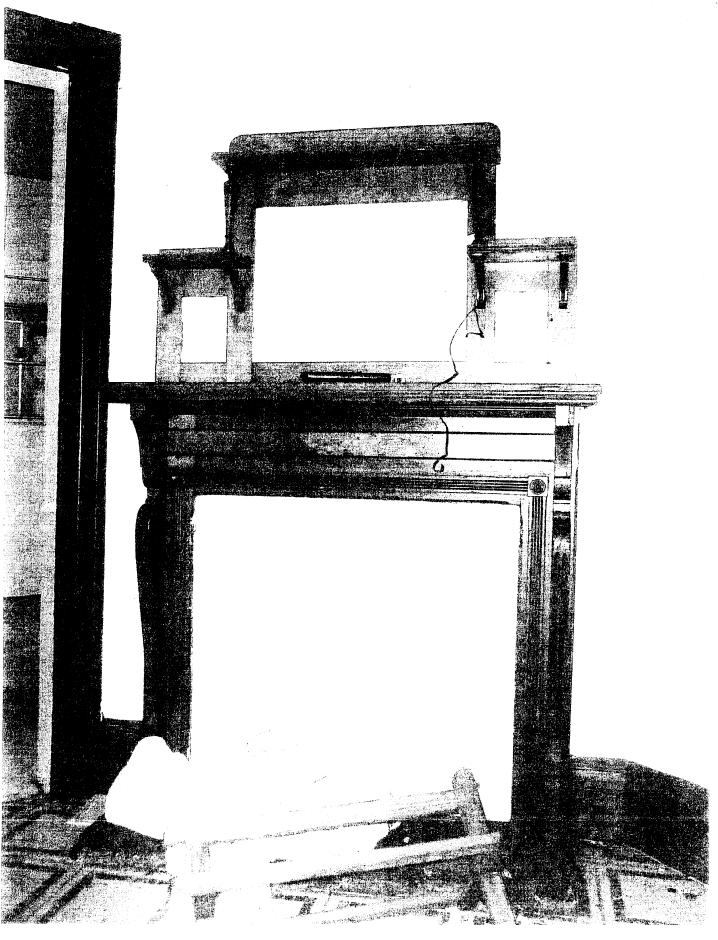

HIS is a one and a half story cottage of six rooms designed for a corner plot. It has plain outlines with the addition of a projecting or overhanging front pediment, and shingled sides; altogether giving an appearance in harmony with rural surroundings. The hall is entered from a porch at the side, and adjoins the parlor and living room. The bed room has an outlook to the front. The stairs in the hall lead to the second story, where there are three chambers. A cellar under the whole with stairs under the main flight from the kitchen provides ample space for fuel, stores, etc. The estimate on opposite page indicates the general character of the building. Observe that the timber is thoroughly seasoned and inclosed with sheathing and paper, and then shingled, so that the sides have three coverings, insuring protection from both outward cold in winter and heat in summer. A liberal amount is allowed for painting, which for good effects should not in any case be slighted.

PASSAIC.

HIS cottage was designed for the residence of a physician, and will interest any persons having professional or official callings requiring an office in their dwellings, where business callers shall not feel that they are intruding on the privacy of the household. There are two entrances from the front veranda. The one with double doors leading to the main hall, and through it to the principal rooms of the house. The single front door opens to the office, which is divided midway of its length and a large bay window added, making a pleasant study and consultation room of the rear portion. The floor plans show clearly the arrangement and dimensions of the several parts. For family use there is a parlor, dining room, and kitchen in the first story. Four bed chambers and a bathroom in the second story. In addition to these there is an attic

- Mansard/Second Empire: 1855-1880. A popular Victorian style with a distinctive double sloped roof with many dormers. Usually a slate-sided house, of an imposing style, the Mansard house is immediately recognizable by the roof style. It has windows that are high and narrow.
- Queen Anne: 1875-1910 Also includes the Queen Anne Revival, and Queen Anne Eastlake styles. This is the quintessential "Victorian" house. This is the most elaborate of any Victorian style, with gingerbread work and elaborate woodwork both outside and inside. It is nonsymmetrical, loaded with gables, dormers, chimneys, towers, etc.
- Carpenter Gothic: 1875-1910. These houses were reconized because of the distinctive sawn ornamentation. Sawn ornament was possible because of the relatively new invention of the coping saw. This is an elaborate decorative technique, with gothic tones. It is the style called Gingerbread.
- Stick/Eastlake: 1860-1890. Also called Eastern Stitck Style, or High Victorian Eastlake. This is almost carpenter gothic, but with more elaborate carving.
 - Shingle-Style: 1880-1910 The Shingle-Style is the last and probably least eclectic of the styles. The fabulous gingerbread is gone, and the early 20th century style is beginning to emerge.
 - Romanesque 1880-1900. Also called Romanesque Revival, Richardson Romanesque
- Renaissance also called Renaissance Revival, Romano-Tuscan mode, Northern Italian, or Italian Renaissance, French Renaissance, and Second Renaissance Revival.

Late 19th/20th Century Revival

- Beaux Arts 1885-1930. Also called Beaux Arts Classicism
- Colonial Revival: 1890-1930 Also called Georgian Revival. A revival of the Colonial, or Empire styles with new building techniques.
- Classical Revival also called Neo-Classicism
- Tudor Revival also called Jacobean Revival
- Late Gothic Revival also called Collegiate Gothic, for it's popularity on University and College campuses.
- Mission/Spanish also called Spanish Revival, Mediterranean
- Italian Renaissance
- French Renaissance
- Pueblo

Late 19th/20th Century American Movement

- Prairie Schoole also called Sullivanesque
- Commercial Style
- Chicago
- Skyscrapers
- Bungalow/Craftsman -- also called Western Stick.
