

Descendants of Thomas Lewis

istries, and predictions of failure cast against it both openly and covertly by enemies. From one of these reports dated April 5, 1887, and published in the Pasadena Union, I quote the following passages which show something of the situation then.

"But sundry special threats have been circulated which it may be well to report.

"While the ordinance was pending a threat was reported as coming directly from the Los Angeles Liquor Association's attorney, that he would break down our city charter -- show in open court that Pasadena had never been lawfully incorporated -- that all her municipal acts were null and void -- and thus remand her to the sovereignty of the county board of supervisors again. This, he said, "would knock the stuffing out of all her damned foolishness on the liquor question." This idle boast fell flat and limp, as a drunk man falleth.

"2d. They would prosecute those who pledged money in the case for offering a bribe to the city trustees. This little threat was a child of being nug wisdom, and died of froth on the brain.

"3d. They would prosecute for damages every man who signed a pledge of money to enforce that ordinance, as being engaged in a conspiracy to destroy the business of a fellow citizen and drive him out of town. This threat got up a little scare for one or two days; but six men who had signed for $100 each, said they would make their pledges $500 right away if the liquor men would only start in on that game. They didn't start.

"4th. They will keep on selling liquor in spite of the ordinance against it, and then see what the city will do. This is the latest word from the whisky camp, and is probably just about what they will do.

"Of course it does not rest with the saloon keeper here. He is a mer figure-head, and will have to do whatever the liquor organization at Los Angeles decides they had better do in this particular case. We know full well the David-and-Goliath nature of the conflict. It is little Pasadena against the entire liquor interest of California; for if Pasadena can drive the dram shop out of her limits, there are a hundred other towns in the State ready to take the same step at once. Our people are not going to be blind. They have counted the cost; they have planted their battle-flag and stand firm and steady in solid square around it, ready for the enemy's attack in front, flank, or rear."

Of course, when the first Monday of May arrived, Mr. Campbell went on with his saloon, in defiance of the law. He was arrested, tried in the Pasadena police court, convicted, and sentenced to $100 fine, or imprisonment 100 days. C. N. Terry, judge. He appealed his case to the superior court at Los Angeles, and there it hung for several weeks. The committee had engaged Williams & McKinley to carry the case, as attorneys for the people, through the superior court and supreme court for $1,000; and although this was all agreed upon, they showed their faith in the case, in opposition to the opinions of a large majority of the Los Angeles lawyers, by voluntarily giving Dr. Reid a written agreement, that if their position on the right of the city trustees to prohibit liquor saloons was not sustained by the saloon court, they would relinquish $500 of their fee. Reardon & Daly attorneys for the saloon-keeper. They talked of great confidence in the case, and other lawyers freely expressed the opinion that "the prohibitionists would get beaten out of their boots;" yet in spite of this they would not shy and pursued a dallying policy, as the following correspondence shows.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., May 26, 1887.

H. A. REID,

Dear Sir:--We presume you think we are making slow progress, and are certainly right in that presumption. We have been camping with our fellows from day to day until we are out of patience. They keep insisting to go into court, but always have some little thing which they want to say yet. We have notified Reardon & Daly that unless they take the matter up by to-morrow noon we will consider all stipulations at an end and take our course in the matter. If they do not proceed we will notify the marshal, and let the war go on. Our idea will be to put him into jail and keep him there until released by legal process. We will write you as we know result.

Yours,

WILLIAMS & MCKINLEY.

But the very next day the following note was sent: "We got our corpus case disposed of pro forma in the Superior Court this morning. I have had a great amount of trouble and annoyance in getting those people to do anything, but they came to time at last. W. & McK."

The case now went to the Superior Court; but that court refused to act until it had had a full hearing in the Los Angeles Superior Court, and so sent it back with an order for Judge Wm. A. Cheney to hear the case. His decision, rendered July 7, 1887,* fully sustained the law. The then went to the supreme court again; and this body waited their full term of time, ninety days after hearing, before rendering their decision. When it came [October 31, 1887], the whisky lion of California sunk back into his den with a very large flea in his ear, for six out of seven of the supreme judges agreed that the Pasadena ordinance was good bed-rock under the constitution of California, and also of the United States.

The Pasadena saloon had been running in full glare all this time, pending the decision; but when the result was reported by telegraph the proprietor did not wait for official notice to be served upon him. He closed his saloon at once, packed up his outlawed liquors and bar fixtures and went out of town before the order of the supreme court could reach the officers. A great mass meeting to give thanks and rejoice over this victory was held in the Methodist Church; and Pasadena then stood the first and only town in California which had driven the liquor trade from its borders by legal process, fought and sustained through all the courts. The committee now deemed its work done; and from a brief run-down sketch of the whole matter in the editorial columns of the Valley Union, note a few paragraphs worthy of permanent historic record:

*The arguments on the case were heard June 27, and again June 30.

The total amount thus pledged was $5,935, of which 10 per cent. was when note signed.

A good many who had signed subscription papers refused to sign initial notes, and many others could not be found; so that the above are the historic names who stepped to the front and made our legal contest victory against saloons possible.

Those signers expected to pay ten installments, but instead of that only had to pay two. This result was gained by Dr. Reid collecting a net $109.50 for the cause from the following persons who did not sign but who sympathized with the work: Peter Sumstine, C. E. Daily, C. Michener, James Clarke, W. C. Carpenter, J. F. Steen, R. E. Key, I. B. Lambert, L. H. Michener, W. J. Barcus, W. J. Goss, A. O. Jones, James Hewitt, J. F. Church, R. B. Hubbard, and the $17 from the Williams' Hall meeting."

Several of the above signers when their notes were returned to them were framed to preserve as heirlooms in the family. The Union's editor, speaking of the Supreme Court decision, further says:

The opinion of the court was delivered by Justice Patterson, a republican and concurred in by Searles, (C. J.) Sharpstein, McKinstry, Temple, and all democrats, while McFarland, republican, filed a dissenting opinion."

HOW WAS IT ACCOMPLISHED?

The result exceeded the most sanguine hopes of the committee and their friends, for they had expected the court would stand four to three, or possibly five to two, but six to one was not dreamed of. This happy result is due to the fact that, by the most watchful and painstaking care from every inception of the movement, the case was gotten into court free from any technical questions or side issues, so that the court had nothing before it but the one plain question of law—has Pasadena a lawful right to prohibit liquor saloons, or has she not? It took a vast deal of discreet counsel, skilful management, patience, forbearance, faith and forecast to win and hold the case in this shape; but it won at last, and so settled the matter for the whole State."

HOW MUCH MONEY?

January 23, 1887, the first committee was appointed, with Dr. H. A. Jones chairman, to carry on this work; and from that time until now the citizens of Pasadena have contributed a total of $1310.80 for this special fund. Every item of the expense account was carefully audited by the committee in quorum session, before being paid. It has been a hard battle, but fought and nobly won."

HISTORY OF PASADENA. 252

The Executive Committee which had charge of the work on behalf of the citizens of Pasadena of outlawing liquor saloons has finished its work and formally disbanded, as shown by the following resolutions adopted at their meeting on November 18, 1887:

WHEREAS, The special object and purpose for which we were constituted an Executive Committee on behalf of the citizens of Pasadena has been fully and successfully accomplished, and funds enough to meet all financial obligations incurred by us in carrying on our work have been collected, therefore,

Resolved, That the chairman is instructed to pay the balance of all claims by proper draft on the treasurer, and to return the Indemnity Pledges to their respective signers. [See list below.]

Resolved, That all funds remaining in our hands as a committee be in charge of C. W. Abbott, to co-operate with the city officers in securing the enforcement of the anti-saloon ordinance.

Resolved, That we now formally dissolve our organization and cease to exist or be any further in vogue as such committee.

Women Can Stay Young, Says Mrs. Anne B. Luckey, Who Began Writing When Children Married

Always A Dreamer, Local Woman Turned Dreams Into Checks By Selling Children's Stories Inspired By

Pat Biography
AUTHOR'S Small Grandson Defies Old Age

PASADENA

By RUTH ELLHEIMER

"No woman needs to be put on the shelf because of wrinkles and grey hair. When her children are grown is the time for her to put her talents to work. If she has a vital interest in life, she can't be old."

So firmly does Mrs. Anne B. Luckey believe this that today after twenty years of mothering and fathering her four children, while she headed social service work in this city, and after years of illness, she has turned the dreams of those years into an actual livelihood through the medium of children's stories.

Always A Dreamer
"I've written since I was 14," she recalls, "and I've dreamed dreams since I was six. Many times my children would say 'Oh, there goes mother dreaming again,' but the dreams that turn into checks justified themselves."

The thrill of seeing her name in print was the only remuneration for the first story she ever wrote, at the age of 24. The second, written ten years ago, brought a check and paved the way for the sale of twenty more children's stories for the same magazine, "Child's Garden."

Never Discouraged
Until the depression, Mrs. Luckey sold practically every story that she wrote on its first trip, but even a poor market did not discourage her pen. Today she has boxes of tales ready for a coming demand, a collection of published and unpublished stories for children and a juvenile novelette.

'Writers Born'
Writers are born, not made, Mrs. Luckey believes. Training, she adds, is an asset, although she had no instruction until three years ago after she had sold practically thirty stories unaided. "The only way to find out if you can write is to try," she advised.

"Characters simply move in on me," says the writer. "If one comes to me as a doctor, no matter how much I want him to be a lawyer, a doctor he remains."

Can't 'Make' Stories
"It is impossible for me to sit down and write a story in cold blood. The idea comes to me out of the blue and I can't rest until it is on paper. Sometimes the stories come faster than I can write them."

Mrs. Luckey's "Pat" stories printed in Child's Garden are centered about her young grandson and follow his development and changing interests. The first of the series appearing in September, 1925, was entitled "Pat's Kindergarten." Its setting was the Broadoaks School and Miss Ida Brooks, one of its principals, was pictured with "Pat" in the garden for the cover design for that issue.

Wrote Articles Too
The Pasadenan has written articles for industrial magazines, as well. Crystallizing in words information that one may have for the asking, she wrote about one product which enjoyed a booming sale as the result of her feature story. Speaking modestly for her accomplishments, Mrs. Luckey confesses that she tells her story only in the hope of inspiring other women to retain a vigorous interest in life.

Was Social Worker
Her own work here in social service is well known to old residents. She entered it as a young widow with a family to raise. She helped found the old Emergency League which flourished for years without city or county aid. Finally, through her efforts, the city charter was changed allowing an annual subscription of $10,000 in municipal funds. Later, the organization merged with the Associated Charities and Mrs. Luckey was asked to give the new body a name. She called it the Pasadena Welfare Bureau.

At the request of Mrs. Luckey, the late William A. Scripps made possible the Scripps Home, now the Pasadena Home for the Aged.

Fountain of Energy
After twenty years in social service, her health broke, but even today, although not robust, Anne B. Luckey is a fountain of energy and an inspiration to young and old alike. A member of All Saints' Episcopal Church, she is more active in its work now than ever. Her simple home is located at 597 North Mentor avenue, where her daughter, Mrs. Charles Green of Fort Miller Ranch, Fresno, has been visiting her for the past fortnight.

It is a sad tale of hard luck that is set forth in the complaint filed in the Superior Court yesterday by James Carty, who says the court is not satisfied that he is a competent defendant.

David alleges that the wife has not only failed to carry out the provisions of the agreement accompanying the gift of the property, but that she has also used the same for a purpose other than that intended by the donor.

The couple were married in 1898 and, at the time of the suit, he says he was the dominant financial support of the family. He alleges that she has used the property for a purpose other than that intended by the donor.

Early this year he brought an action against her for divorce and agreed to court in July 1910. He says she has not only failed to carry out the provisions of the agreement accompanying the gift of the property, but that she has also used the same for a purpose other than that intended by the donor.

CONTENT OF COURT.

It is charged to him by the complainant that she has used the property for a purpose other than that intended by the donor. He alleges that she has used the property for a purpose other than that intended by the donor.

The plaintiff alleges that she is the owner of the property and that on May 1, 1910, she conveyed to her husband, James Carty, the property in question for the purpose of her life and the life of her children.

Allegations were made by the plaintiff that the defendant had failed to carry out the provisions of the agreement accompanying the gift of the property, but that she has also used the same for a purpose other than that intended by the donor.

SPLIT-UP OVER CHARITY IN PASADENA'S LEAGUE.

Two Veteran Workers Dismissed Because of Discussions Over Office Management — Nat Goodwin and Cudahy Maiden Guests of Honor at Birthday Celebration—How the Hotel Mary land Catches Rats.

(LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE)

PASADENA, July 18.—After a long executive session from which the public was excluded, the members of the Board of Trustees of Pasadena Charitable League voted to dismiss Mrs. Anna M. Luckey, sold and Miss Lila Sewell, visiting nurses, and yesterday two charity workers in Pasadena were notified that after August 1 their services would be no longer needed.

The dismissal came in the form of a note which merely stated that because of dissension in the office it was considered for the best of all concerned that their services be dispensed with. This leaves only Miss Thyrin Barton, general secretary, and Miss Edith C. Williams, formerly the secretary, having been dropped from the list several weeks ago.

According to W. D. Russell, president of the Board of Trustees, the action which the announcement yesterday has been pending since last February, at which time the members dismissed the action of the entire office, facing the different forms of the league. At that time, says Mr. Russell, the board had been quietly investigating the different members and has arrived at the conclusion that it was impossible to bring about a state of harmony.

"We have not dismissed Mrs. Barton," said President Russell last night, "but whether she will remain or not cannot say. She is a wealthy girl and can, of course, get work of this kind anywhere, and she may not wish to remain and shoulder all the responsibility that is now placed on her, but I wish to say that in all our investigation we did not find one thing that she had done that we disapproved of. In the matter of Miss Luckey and Miss Sewell we found it impossible to get them to work in accordance with the wishes of the board."

Friends of the two women who were dismissed valued their disapproval of the action of the entire office yesterday and did not hesitate to say that they would demand an investigation. Mrs. Luckey, who was the organizer of the Emergency League of Pasadena eleven years ago, and who was its general secretary for ten years until its consolidation with the Pasadena Charitable League in 1913, was deeply grieved at the action of the board and expressed her opinion that she should be so summarily dismissed. She stated last night that of course she knew that the trouble in the office was known to the board but that she had been assured by two members last week that she would not lose her position because of a difference of opinion between herself and Miss Barton as to how the work should be handled.

"I love my people," she said last night, "and it was impossible for me to conduct the work along the lines laid out by Miss Barton. To maintain how dirty so poor a person is there is always some good if you can only love it into him. Miss Barton is a very dear girl, but she has always been very weakly and she has had many times that her salary was just pin-money for her, and of course it is probably difficult for her to believe that people are ever really starving. I have seen grown men come from her office looking like babies."

Mrs. Sewell, who has been visiting nurse for the past five years, is one of the most popular charity workers in Pasadena. During a recent automobile contest she was given the second largest number of votes and those she worked for her were from every station of life. She said last night that she would continue working for charity as her heart was in such work. Her difference with Miss Barton lay in the way she conducted the investigations. I have found also out of the applicants for charity deserving of consideration when being questioned and I would rather cry on the side of head than of heart.

Miss Barton refused yesterday to make a statement, saying that she had no interest whatever in the matter, as it was entirely between the board and the two workers who were dismissed.

According to President Russell, Miss Barton was placed in charge of the league work in April, 1914, having come from Chicago, where she had been for two years acting as "visitor" for the United Charities of that city. "She is a very charming young woman," said Mr. Russell last night, "and when we heard the stories of her being taken up by the poor we could not believe them and so we have quietly investigated and we have found out one thing to her discredit. We also investigated certain cases where Mrs. Luckey and the board disposed in the manner of handling and we could not uphold her methods. Of course she has been associated with charity work for many years, but what she knows she learned herself. Her temperament and training made it impossible for her to work along the lines laid out by the trustees."

Mr. Russell stated that the board very reluctantly parted with Mrs. Luckey and Miss Sewell as the members know how dearly both women were loved by the poor and needy.

There are thirteen members of the board of trustees and ten of the members are said to have been present at the meeting which was held Thursday afternoon, but according to one member these present know that the action would cause much comment so all agreed not to say a word for publication to lessen the matter of explaining to President Russell.

The members of the board are among the most prominent people of Pasadena. The league depends upon the city and upon private donations for its funds.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Youth and old, innocent and dignified sat down together last night at the Cudahy bungalow in the Maryland Court and celebrated their birthday together. The two principals were Nat Goodwin and Anne Cudahy. Nat's cake had fifty-seven candles on it; Anne's had only eleven. But she counted for naught with that cheery group assembled round the pink birthday cake.

They talk of so much joyous excitement at the feast that everyone forgot to eat. Telling stories and discussing each other with their caps seemed to be the big event of the evening. And then, every little while, Nat would have to get up and look at his table piled high with presents. And then Anne would have to get up and do the same thing. Talkative till around, all had the jolliest time of their lives.

Anne was extremely proud of a picture of Nat presented to her by the comedian, the first one taken from the new photoplay, "Business is Business," showing Nat at the stuporous Froeschman who has made two million francs but who cannot buy his way into society. Anne had so many other presents that it would be almost impossible to enumerate them, but some of the finest were a pearl and diamond necklace from her mother, Mrs. "Jack" Cudahy, and an engraved crystal surrounded by pearls, a gift from Miss Goodwin, who was formerly Marcia Moreland. "Jack" Cudahy gave his young-but daughter a bracelet, of which she is exceedingly proud.

Those who were guests at the party were Mr. and Mrs. Nat Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. "Jack" Cudahy, the Misses Marcia Smart, Doris Ovington, Anne Cudahy, Marie Cudahy, Edna Cudahy and Mamma Cudahy, Fay Jensen, Fred Loomis and Schuyler Cole. The table was beautifully decorated with pink roses, and pink streamers festooned down from the rafters. The two birthday cakes were also pink.

RAT TRAP DE LUXE

The Hotel Green, magnificent in all its appointments, is not neglectful of the small things, such as rat traps. For instance, The rat trap resembles a a corner of the basement is a rat trap de luxe, and it is a pleasure to be caught in it. A trap through it reminds one of those fabled journeys of "Alice Through the Looking-glass."

First, Mr. Rat, attracted by the smell of sweet cream, is supposed to be at the door and enter. He then faces a mirror at the opposite side of the hall. After hanging his hat on the hat-rack, he observes through the iron bars over the mirror the bait that attracted him. Unable to reach it, he walks up and down and finds himself in a deep corridor with daylight showing at the end. Suddenly realizing that he has left his hat behind, the rat turns to scampar downstairs again.

Nothing, you see. A door has sprung up and he's out the way. So he enters the corridor, walks through it out of darkness into light—and drops into a bucket of water. Then the door opens for the next rat.

CRIT BARKER

A burglar last night climbed through the transom of the private office of Manager Jack Root of the Street Railway and found with a tin box containing $12. The evening's cash. The box was in the desk, which had been pried open with an iron bar. The theft was not discovered until Mr.

Root entered his office as the house was being closed for the night.

Frank Holly of Washington, who, out of gratitude for reinstating his eyesight after being blind for twenty years, dedicated the remainder of his life to the visual education idea, is visiting Carl H. Carson, president of the Visual Education Association of California. Mr. Carson has built up a remarkably complete bureau along these lines in connection with his High School work, and it is mainly to see what Mr. Carson has accomplished that Mr. Holly is here.

The Ladies of the O.A.R. yesterday presented a new fair to the city at the annual picnic held in La Pinteiras Park. They have promised to renew it whenever it becomes tattered and torn.

HISTORIC

they were all ousted in a recall election in December 1931.

The scandal, uncovered as early as 1927, involved employees in the street and engineering department, where a ring of forgers had embezzled thousands of dollars in city funds. A number of those involved went to San Quentin, but the board failed to fire the city manager. Not until the 1930 election did reformers get enough seats on the board to force Orbison's resignation, based on incriminating testimony from the deputy city controller. Once Orbison resigned, however, the board deadlocked over the appointment of a new city manager. C. Wellington Komer, Pasadena's first city manager, applied for the job. He was supported by the reformers, but eventually withdrew his application to break the deadlock, leaving the board free to appoint the other candidate, John W. Charleville.

The deadlock over the city manager as well as many other issues led to harsh words and shrill accusations in the council chambers. On one occasion a policeman had to be called in to restore order. In the meantime, city government was standing still: water projects were not moving forward, and unemployment was mounting.

Finally, in October 1931, the Pasadena Association, an organization of 210 members newly formed by Myron Hunt and his second wife, Virginia Pease Hunt, voted to mount a recall campaign. They gathered the required number of signatures in a short time, and the election was set for December 28. What followed was a fierce campaign, characterized by vituperation and mudslinging on all sides. Another organization, the Better Government League, entered the fray, supporting the three reformers on the City Board, Francis J. Walker, William J. Wise, and Robert S. Allen, and three additional candidates, McJellan Reed, George E. Lee, and Arthur L. Hamilton, the latter a former city commissioner and superintendent of schools. Halbert P. Gardner, chairman of the Pasadena Association, charged that the reformers were preparing the soil for Communist and "Red" propaganda, and that Mayor Patrick Walker, a conservative, was trying to re-institute the mayor-council form of government. Labor leader Edward B. Hilber supported the Pasadena Association because the city had refused to give Pasadena residents priority for jobs on city building projects such as City Hall, the Rose Bowl expansion, and the Hall of Justice. Other labor leaders, however, including Fred W. Jackson, editor of the Pasadena Labor News, supported the Better Government League candidates, as did Pasadena's black voters. League candidates promised to take stronger action on the unemployment question than any of the other candidates.

The incumbents fought back and were later accused of planting a spy in the association offices to report any suspicious campaign contributions. Voters went to the polls in record numbers despite the pouring rain on election day. Pasadena Association candidates were victorious, sweeping out the entire board and replacing them with a completely new slate. The new directors were Milton Brenner, Robert Fulton, Peter Hall, Robert Lawson, John Lutes, Albert Stewart, and Edward O. Day. Once the new board took office, however, they had to face Pasadena's unemployment problem directly.

At a mass meeting on unemployment held in the new Civic Auditorium in the spring of 1932 and reported in the newspapers, Pasadenians from all walks of life told their stories of deprivation and even starvation. The newspaper reported that a young waitress hired to help

Match covers on Colorado Boulevard was a legendary locally owned grocery store which served Pasadenians for decades. This photograph shows the interior during the 1950s.

NEW CONTROL FOR CHARITY?

Paradise League Dismissals Arouse Displeasure.

City Ordinance may Change Methods Employed.

Good Templars Plan Another Dry Campaign.

Mrs. Anna M. Luckey.
 Closely identified with charity work of Paradise for seven years, whose dismissal from the working force of the Paradise Charity League has created a veritable storm of disapproval.

PARADISE, July 22.—The storm which has been brewing for months among the members of the Paradise Charity League and which nearly broke last week at Mrs. Anna M. Luckey, said secretary, and Miss Letta Sewell, visiting nurse, has apparently subsided again with greater force than ever. General dissatisfaction over the removal of two of the oldest workers in the charity department has grown until yesterday it was announced by Chairman A. L. Hamilton of the City Commissioners that he has ordered drafted a city ordinance which would place the charity work under the supervision of the city.

"We want to make the ordinance acceptable to the municipal and department," said Chairman Hamilton last night, "so that the league officers will be willing to leave the field. We would not think of going into competition with any organization trying to do the same work we would be doing."

Chairman Hamilton stated last night that the trustees of the Paradise Charity League had been for some time trying to get the city to take over the charitable work and that while the removal of the two workers was not the reason for the drafting of the new ordinance, he would not say this matter did not have something to do with it being considered at this time.

The removal of Mrs. Luckey and Miss Sewell has been the topic of discussion at club and organization meetings since their removal, and on every side protests have been poured in to the Trustees. Petitions are being circulated and a number of property owners have publicly protested against the removal of the two women, claiming that as the league depends nearly on the taxpayers for support, the taxpayers should have a voice in the rejection of those who displease the funds.

Both Mrs. Luckey and Miss Sewell are very popular women and have a host of friends.

NEW DRY CAMPAIGN.

Conservationists struck the business district of Paradise yesterday when it was learned that the Good Templars were going to launch another dry campaign in the near future. Charles H. Sawyer, one of the leading proponents of the law, stated that the City Commissioners could not be depended on to give strict enforcement to the present liquor ordinance, and that an amended "dry" ordinance taking all discretion out of the hands of the Commission should be adopted.

The present liquor ordinance, which has proved entirely satisfactory so far as the business interests of the city are concerned, was adopted by a majority of the voters two years ago after one of the most exciting campaigns in local history. It is considered quite probable that should the "Paradise Dry" issue be brought before the people again, it would carry by a landslide, as the "dry" has been very busy propagating their doctrine in the interim.

The decision to start the campaign will probably be reached at the next meeting of the Good Templars, according to Mr. Sawyer. When the campaign starts it is aimed to secure the signatures of an actual majority of the voters in favor of a strong dry ordinance.

Many people in Paradise, especially the business men, feel that a "dry" ordinance would impose a severe handicap on the hotels which at the present time have a table license. Liquor can only be bought for two hours at noon time, and from 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock in the evening with a special, and this is not considered satisfactory.

CITY BRIEFS.

Unconscious as the result of a epileptic stroke yesterday Charles F. Crowell of No. 121 North Marengo avenue is lying in a certain residence at his ranch near San Bernardino. Mr. Crowell is one of the best known contractors in Southern California, being the major partner of the firm of Crowell & Roward.

For the purpose of starting a campaign in the interest of Paradise-made bread and baked goods the master bakers of this city last night formed an organization which has been joined by nearly all the bakers in the city. One of the purposes of the new body will be to lubricate into the buying public the spirit of patronizing home industry.

It is reliable that the Throppe College authorities consider the address made in relation to City Building that they have had it pointed in pamphlet form, and it will be given wide distribution.

PASS PETITION TO CHURCHMEN.

Friends Seek Appointment for Pasadena Woman.

Hundreds After Service Sign for Charity Worker.

Thousand Prominent Tourists Take in the Sights.

PASADENA, Aug. 8.—Six hundred women friends of Mrs. Anna M. Lockey to obtain for her a petition on the proposed Municipal Charitable League that they could not wait until today to begin circulating a petition in her favor, but started the ball rolling at the churches yesterday morning, securing hundreds of names in a very few hours.

Mrs. Lockey was distressed from the past week because of alleged discord with Miss Burton, in charge of the work of the League, and was later given a temporary position in the League as a temporary visiting nurse. A proposition is now before the City Commission to abolish the Charitable League, and make it a municipal organization.

Friends of Mrs. Lockey desire that she be retained permanently on the new Municipal League, and are circulating a petition to this effect. Robert M. Dumas, city clerk, and on request he drew up the petition. Hundreds of citizens who refuse special consideration in Mrs. Lockey's favor are being retained by the city because of her many admirable qualifications.

TOURISTS GALORE.

Nearly 1000 tourists visited Pasadena yesterday, motoring along the beautiful boulevards and visiting the historic landmarks of Alhambra and charming Oak Knoll.

Large crowds crowded for luncheon at the Hotel Maryland and Green. The Alhambra, the Hotel Green and the Hotel Knott were crowded with tourists. Frank tours had luncheon and were enthusiastic about the beauties of the Pasadena and other Southern California cities.

CONDITIONS IMPROVE.

The condition of Harold Hunt and Theodore La Combe, who were seriously injured in a motorcycle accident Friday night when Miss Frances Noble was killed, has improved considerably since last night. Neither of the two young men have been told of the girl's death.

CHARITY WORK IS DEBATABLE.

*Yosemite City Philanthropists

Injured Dairyman Sues City for Appendicitis.

PASADENA, Oct. 8.—The trouble which the discord in the management of the Pasadena Charitable League and a-levating some women are, and which many believed to be settled when the City Commissioners contemplated taking over the department, so severely in still showing, for yesterday a lively conference was held in the Charitable League headquarters, attended by all the Commissioners and the directors of the Charitable League, and a number of the members of the Civic Research committee.

This meeting, it is carefully explained, was most harmonious. However, a committee was named comprising A. L. Hamilton, representing the City Commissioners; W. D. Russell and Lay O. Matson, of the Charitable League; and Edna E. Richardson of the Civic Research Committee, whose duties will be to arrange the details of the transfer by the city of the management of organized charitable work here.

There was some opposition to this arrangement to the city's taking charge of the charitable work on the part of some of the church people. C. A. Spaulding of Westminster Presbyterian Church making quite a hearty protest, expressing his belief that the handling of charity could not be left to any commissioner or committee, fearing that politics might thereby enter into the handling of charity.

HEATED DEBATE.

A commotion of like similar kind from Edward C. Simons was also read. The debate over this mooted question grew quite heated at this point, it was asserted.

From the report of the meeting yesterday morning it is evident that the City Commissioners mean to eventually take over all the work of the organized charity.

The discord in the management of the organized charities first became public last July, when the Charitable League, without giving any reason except "the good of the cause," removed Mrs. Anna M. Lucker, who for many years had been identified with the charitable work of Pasadena and been paid secretary of the league since its organization.

The committee named yesterday is to serve a means whereby the transfer of this work will be accomplished with the aid and good will of all the charitable organizations of the city.

OVER BILLING.

Because he says that Pasadena gave him appendicitis, W. A. Williams, a dairyman of Lancaster Park, wants the city to pay him damages. While driving his automobile on his milk route in Altadena, he ran into a wire of the municipal lighting department which had become loose from the pole, the end lying in the street, and was thrown against the steering wheel of his machine. As a result he says that he is suffering from appendicitis and holds the city responsible for his condition.

Fire which broke out near Millard's Chapel and threatened to consume the building of Chas. J. Camp, after burning over two acres of ground was smothered yesterday, through the prompt action of Fire Warden W. F. Chas. Forest Ranger James Stanchfield and several men from Los Vista Sanitarium. The blaze started on the trail between MILLARD'S CHAPEL and Chas. J. Camp's camp and while it raged snatched the fire-fighters were on the job.

Pasadena's "River of Death" was visited yesterday by Commissioners Allen and Halsey, and fish were found in the reservoir hole which the water from the well is pumped. The property is situated in Inland Empire, about thirty-five miles from Pasadena. Yesterday the well pumped for the city supplied a "tap" of about 100 cubic feet.

Prof. Charles Frederick Holder, whose original illness had caused his many friends grave concern, was reported last night to be in about the same condition as during the last few days. Almost no hope for recovery is held out by the physicians who have been doing their utmost to cure him.

A surprise party in form of a barbecue by the entire Municipal Board was the means by which T. B. Malstrom's birthday was celebrated last night. He has not told which business is his 100th birthday marked. He is a former member of the board and was with them last in the afternoon. He was much surprised when the entire number arrived at his home early in the evening with their instruments and gave a band concert. There were twenty-five other guests present. After the concert an all-outdoor watermelon feast was served to the boys.

Secretary of the Treasury Knicker is expected to be in Pasadena in a week or two to look over the new $500,000 Federal building which is in his department. While in Pasadena Secretary and Mrs. Knicker will probably stop at the Murray Hotel. However, while in the part of the town which they will probably not meet of their time in Altadena with his daughter, Mrs. Knicker.

THE PASADENA HOME FOR THE AGED

William A. Scripps purchased the Altadena residence of Ira C. Goodridge in 1911. He offered it to the Emergency League of Pasadena as a gift the following year. The organization was providing care for a group of elderly people in a rented building known as 'The Home for Aged Women.' They decided to accept his gift as it was ideal for that purpose. It had been built by Professor Thaddeus Lowe for his son Thad Jr. in about 1896.

The property was decided over to 'The William A. Scripps Home for Aged People' in accordance with the charter issued on January 21, 1913. It was located on the southeast corner of Calaveras Street and El Molino Avenue. Scripps also contributed about eight acres of the adjoining land and a two-story annex, which was completed a short time before his death on December 31, 1914. 'Gloria Cottage,' a small hospital donated by Mrs. A.F. Gartz that same year, was named after her daughter.

A spacious new building with a lounge, dining room, kitchen, and sleeping quarters for sixty-six people was completed in 1922. The name was changed to 'The Pasadena Home for the Aged' at that time. Winifred E. and Florence M. Scripps, the founder's daughters, donated part of the funds. Additional wings built in 1926 and 1956 were financed by friends, relatives, and legacies. Most of the original buildings were torn down, and a new infirmary was added during that period.

'The Scripps Home' was chosen as being a more appropriate name for the benevolent institution in 1962. A new hospital and the modern community building on El Molino Avenue were dedicated the following year. The latter has a visitor's lounge with a reception desk, and a large auditorium that also serves as a chapel. Gloria Cottage, the original hospital, is still being used by the maintenance superintendent.

The present facilities accommodate one-hundred and fifty single and married people that lead normal lives, and forty-nine who are ill or infirm. Their lifetime contracts include shelter, food, and medical care. All are at least seventy years of age and have been residents of Altadena or Pasadena for more than five years. The program includes sermons as well as excursions, parties, movies, and other forms of entertainment.

The home is being maintained by donations, bequests, and earnings from invested funds. The interior is arranged and furnished like a fine hotel. Hallways leading from the lounge provide access to the rooms. Residents are free to come and go as they please. Many attend social functions at private homes and do their own shopping in the local markets. The staff is headed by Donald W. Cook, Executive Director of the charitable organization.

Another benevolent doctor, Dr. W. J. Geierman, who had had experience in running a sanitarium in Michigan, aspired to establish a facility for asthma sufferers. In 1911, after searching in North Carolina, various places in the Rockies and in California, he picked a site at the base of Echo Mountain, between Las Flores and Rubio Canyons, above North Mt. Curve at the top of Lake Avenue. This was a twenty-four acre bench of chaparral, two thousand feet above sea level. Dr. Geierman could not inspire and attract the financial help that Dr. Stehman had been able to muster. Nevertheless, his Hygeia Hotel, as he called it, was able to build ten cottages in time, plus other necessary facilities, and takes care of many asthmatics.

In 1932, the Sisters of St. Joseph, originally from La Grange, Illinois, and established in Orange, California, as well, began to plan a hospital to be located in Altadena. They purchased twelve acres of land near the end of Washington Street, east of Altadena Drive. Construction started that year and St. Luke's Hospital opened July 30, 1933. It was seven stories high, two hundred and four feet long and from forty-one to eighty-eight feet wide. Its construction will permit the addition of more floors on the east and west wings, and an extension to the south. It features a maternity ward, and keeps up to date in pathology, clinical medicine, and on modern equipment. Its initial capacity was 75 beds.

In 1925, a local doctor and nurse built the Altadena Hospital on Lake Avenue, between Boston Street and Morada Place, operating it as a maternity hospital. It could accommodate fourteen patients, and cost $32,000. In 1938, the hospital was purchased by Dr. John Brereton, a practicing osteopathic physician from New York, and a graduate of Des Moines Osteopathic College. He converted it into a general hospital. In 1944, he sold it to Dr. and Mrs. T. G. Mallard; they continued the general hospital until 1946. It was then sold to a group of doctors who formed a non-profit corporation, and renamed the facility the Altadena Community Hospital. In 1957, two new wings were added at a cost of $250,000. This raised the capacity to 22 beds, and added a surgery suite, a delivery room, an X-ray and clinical laboratory, and a dining room and kitchen.

On February 27, 1928, the Los Angeles County Health Department opened a Health Center at 2121 Lincoln Avenue in Altadena, with a staff of three. Other employees were soon added, and in 1929 another center was established in a cottage on the school grounds at John Marshall School. Currently there is just one agency, located at 2490 North Lake Avenue.

In 1888, a Miss Olive Cleveland established an orphanage in her own home—a five room cottage—in South Pasadena. She solicited financial support from the County Supervisors and from wealthy people in Pasadena, South Pasadena and Los Angeles, and built a larger building, called the organization the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society. When Miss Cleveland died, the property was deeded to the Society, and for thirty-eight years the work continued. But eventually the buildings became unsafe and were condemned. The Society was given a lot in Altadena at 760 Mountain View Street, and obtained additional adjacent land, campaigned for funds, and built a new facility in July, 1926. Seven good sized buildings were built on the new site, and the Society continues to serve the primary function of caring for and educating orphans.

In 1921, while working in the Pasadena Hospital, Mrs. Irving Sturgis, president of the Dispensary, came to realize the need for an institution for children which could provide preventive care for those constantly exposed to infectious disease because of home conditions. Her idea received enthusiastic support, funds were raised, and a site for the proposed facility was sought in Altadena. Three times, because of a supposed menace to public health, a proposed location had to be abandoned, but finally in November, 1924, buildings were constructed on the east bank of the Arroyo Seco, in Altadena. The first units cost $60,000, all raised by donations. Known at first as the Preventorium, it has changed its name to the Pasadena Health School.

In 1911, at a meeting of the Pasadena Emergency League, Mr. William A. Scripps was made aware of the need for a more permanent facility for the aged. At that time, the League was renting a house on Mundell Drive for fourteen elderly people. Mr. Scripps had just acquired Professor T. S. C. Lowe's house at the corner of Santa Clara Avenue and Calaveras Street, and he offered to provide a home on his property. He bought an additional eight acres and built on a wing which he called the "Mrs. Scripps Annex." He spent about fifty thousand dollars on the project and then presented it to Pasadena as The William A. Scripps Home for Aged People. Through general contributions from people in Pasadena and Altadena, the home has been enlarged and an infirmary and hospital built on the grounds. But since the Scripps family did not actually endow the home, the Board of Directors have called it The Pasadena Home for the Aged.

In 1923, Walter A. Abbott of South Pasadena, began a paper called the Altadena News. This was a four column sheet, and it received some circulation through the interest of the Altadena Citizens' Association. In 1925 it changed title and ownership—the paper was renamed the Altadena Herald, and the new owners were William E. Perry and Charles E. Decker. They also published a little paper called the Altadena Review. In December, 1925, both of these papers were sold to Cliff Greenman and Arch W. Davis, who published a group of papers in North Pasadena from an office on East Washington Street. They merged the Herald and the Review, resuming the title Altadena News. Ownership changed again in 1926; the News was bought by Laurence Clyde Browne, and in 1927 the publisher was Harry A. Browne. Very little space in the News was given to Altadena news; it yet remained for someone to come out with a bonafide Altadena paper. In 1930, Mr. C. F. Hoffman established a press at 2708 North El Molino Avenue, and the first real Altadena newspaper began publication. It was a weekly and was titled the Altadena Press, and continued in various locations and under new ownership during the depression years. The current paper, the Altadenan is likewise a weekly, and has been published for some years by Harry Smith at 2396 North Lake Avenue. He has also published the Pasadenan, which gives coverage of a broader nature and circulates in Pasadena.

Byron M. Stone is in charge of the United States Post Office. The main station is located at 2271 North Lake Avenue, and the Figueroa Station is at 2561 North Fair Oaks Avenue.

Altadenans take great pride in their community, as a result of which there are no less than nineteen municipal, civic and general welfare organizations—more than in many cities of larger population. One of the most important is the Chamber of Commerce, which was organized in 1924 by L. J. Collison, who was its first President. Currently John Guinn is the President, and Ann Haley the Manager. Meetings are held on the second Tuesday at noon at Fox's Dining Room, 2352 North Lake Avenue. The Altadena Jaycees was chartered March 7, 1946, under its first President, Bill Jaeger. It disbanded in 1952, but reorganized in January, 1963, under Ron Shane as President. Currently the President is Patrick Nichols, and Elmo Murray, the Secretary. The Jaycees meet evenings the second and fourth Tuesdays at St. Mark's Church. These two organizations keep a watchful eye on all civic-related needs and projects, the Jaycees being especially concerned with youth activities. Other groups are Altadena Beautiful, Inc., Altadena Civic Planning Council, Altadena Community Hospital Guild, Altadena Family Service, Altadena Merchants' and Businessmen's Association (a division of the Chamber of Commerce), Altadena-Pasadena Human Relations Committee, Challengers' Club for the Handicapped, Democratic Club of Altadena, Democratic Information Center, East Altadena Improvement Association, Foundation for Human Behavior Research, Huntington Memorial Hospital Altadena Guild, Republican Women's Club Federated of Altadena, Scripps Pasadena Home for the Aged Auxiliary, Tournament of Roses Association, Inc., of Altadena, and West Altadena Civic Association.

Additionally, four service clubs are very much involved in civic projects, and support all that is good for the benefit of Altadena. The Exchange Club meets at the Altadena Town and Country Club, at 2290 Country Club Drive each Wednesday night. Roy Kaprielian is President and Richard Noell is Secretary. The Lions Club convenes at the same place every Thursday night, with Joseph Herman as President and Milton Wood as Secretary. Each Thursday at noon, the Rotary Club holds its weekly meeting, also at the same place as the two former organizations. The current President is William Saleebey, while Dr. Ray Christ serves as Secretary. A ladies' civic club, the Soroptimist, meets every Wednesday at noon, at the Parisian Gardens, at Lake Avenue and Altadena Drive. Ellen Kapp is President, and Vida Newcomb is Secretary. But the patent medicine king, famous hypochondriac, and proprietor of the Hotel Green sold his home around 1900 and moved back to the family's Woodbury, New Jersey residence where his business concerns were centered. He died there in 1932. The Altadena home was demolished in 1966 when Altadena's new library was built on the site. By peering over the south wall of the library parking lot, one can see the old stone carriage house which has been converted to a residence.

Homes also appeared on the north side on Mariposa, including another designed by Roehrig for the nattily dressed Bayard Smith directly across the street from McNally. It was at Smith's home that the Valley Hunt Club was founded in the early 1890s, from whence grew Pasadena's Rose Parade. Smith's house burned in 1894 and a new one was built by later owner Daniel Cameron. This in turn was remodeled by architect Myron Hunt in 1920 and is the house that stands today. The International Theosophical Society has owned it since 1951 in a successful example of adaptive reuse.

On the southwest corner of Mariposa at Santa Anita, a beautiful three-story red shingle house was built for George Chambliss of Connecticut in 1900. He died in 1903 and it was sold to August Benziger, an artist who named the house Afterglow. It stayed in his family until 1989 when it was bequeathed to the Catholic Church and promptly sold. In the 1950s and 40s Afterglow was known as a childcare center, first for those whose parents had tuberculosis, and then for European orphans of World War II. Chambliss' sister moved to Altadena at the same time and built a home next door to him to the west, designed by the same architects, Locke and Munsell.

In 1904 Altadena's social and capital stock rose a tick when members of the prominent Scripps family moved in and built Scripps Hall. The grand three-story craftsman-style residence created for William Armiger Scripps and his second wife Katherine stood at 209 Mariposa; their property included 20 acres bounded by that street on the south, Altadena Drive on the north, Fair Oaks on the west, and Marengo on the east. They also built a gardener's cottage that was still occupied in 2004 by members of the Japanese family that took care of the grounds, including extensive orange groves, for three generations.

The Scripps family was large, with financial interests concentrated in a chain of newspapers in Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and St. Louis, as well as in the printing business. But the Scripps name is better remembered for philanthropy. The Scripps Home in Altadena (originally the Pasadena Home for the Aged) was a gift to the community from William Scripps, and other family members left a legacy of social entrepreneurialism across Southern California. In particular, William's half sister Ellen Browning Scripps presented her community, La Jolla, with many gifts. Chief among those listed in a 1932 obituary were the Bishop's School (with sister E. Virginia Scripps), the Scripps Metabolic Clinic, the Scripps Institute of Biological Research, today known as the Scripps Institute of Oceanography (founded with brother E.W. Scripps); and La Jolla Park. She was also a major contributor to Pomona College, the Claremont Colleges, and the Scripps College for women in Claremont.

One of William Scripps' daughters from his first marriage, Florence, married F.W. Kellogg, a journalist whose meteoric rise began with a job on her family's newspapers. Kellogg went on to found his own media empire which began with the Clover Leaf Papers distributed across the midwest. When these were taken over by a rival media conglomerate he retired and moved to Altadena in 1907 where he and Florence built Highlawn immediately to the east of Scripps Hall at 245 Mariposa. Considerably larger than the paternal home, it was an even grander interpretation of craftsman ideals designed by C.W. Buchanan, the architect of both. Highlawn was named by naturalist John Muir, a good friend and frequent visitor. The home became a center for many social functions presided over by Florence. She was active in community affairs, helped to organize the Women's Circle of Altadena, and the Altadena Welfare Board, and encouraged her father to found the Scripps Home in 1903. But by 1915 her husband had tired of small town life and resumed his career in newspapers. First, Frederick Kellogg took over the San Francisco Morning Call and founded the Oakland Daily Post. When these Altadena's gentry often gathered at the home of Bayard T. Smith, where the Valley Hunt Club was founded. His home was on the northeast corner of Mariposa and Santa Rosa. The club was unusual for having women as 13 of its 24 founding members. Bessie McNally and Mrs. A.C. Armstrong are among those pictured at left.

The Home in the West

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN FERGUSON

Two Little Plastered Houses

THE two plastered bungalows illustrated here are particularly interesting, as apart from their charming exteriors the plans are exceptionally good. White plaster over frame construction forms the exterior and all the outside woodwork is painted white. Red brick in the porches, green lawns and bright flowers give all the color necessary to lend warmth and variety, the effect being cheerful and attractive throughout the California year.

Bungalow A is only twenty-five feet wide and so is suitable for a narrow lot. It has six rooms and a delightful sun porch. The living-room is bright and inviting, with many windows so arranged as to leave plenty of wall space for furniture. The sun porch, which connects the living-room and dining-room, is a very charming and desirable feature; a pair of French doors open from it to the terrace.

B. The interesting feature of this bungalow is the terrace that opens off the dining-room

A. The sun-porch, connecting the living-room and dining-room, is an unusual feature

B. The plan provides a vista from the front porch to the terrace in the rear

This is an unusual item in a house of this size but it certainly provides a distinctive addition and is well worth while.

All the woodwork throughout is finished in ivory enamel and the walls are papered. There is an attractive mantel in the living-room with green tile fireplace, and a well-designed buffet in the dining-room. There are many built-in features, including a dressing-table in the bathroom.

Bungalow B is somewhat larger, being thirty-one feet wide. The interesting feature of this house is the terrace or patio that opens off the dining-room. There is a charming vista of this patio from the entrance door through the living-room and dining-room.

The woodwork of the living-room and dining-room is California redwood finished in its natural color. There are handmade tiles in the fireplace, so the atmosphere of these rooms is restful and artistic. This bungalow also has many built-in features, including a disappearing bed in the front bedroom. Ivory enamel is the surface finish of the woodwork in the bedrooms, the walls being papered with dainty French wall designs. Bathroom and kitchen are also finished in ivory enamel.

Both bungalows have hardwood floors and are heated by gas furnaces.

GERTRUDE APPLETON LUCKLEY.

A. This six-room dwelling, twenty-five feet wide, is suitable for a narrow lot

The Home in the West

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN FERGUSON

Sunlight and cheerfulness were the objects desired in designing this house. Casements occupy one wall in the dining-room

A House of Many Windows

THIS comfortable little house, built at Coronado, California, was designed for light, sunshine and cheerful living. All the windows, and they are numerous, are unusually large, and all the rooms excepting the dining-room have two exposures.

A glance at the plan shows that it is decidedly out of the ordinary. The front door opens from the porch into a large living-room in the center of the house and there is a group of French windows across the entire end wall, through which we look out on the court at the rear. A pleasing addition to this house would be to put a small fountain in this court and enclose the court with glass, which could be done at comparatively little expense, considering the added charm to be gained thereby.

The dining-room, den and solarium open off the living-room, being separated only by buttressed openings, so that the whole effect of the interior is one of spaciousness as well as brightness. A light brown tone was chosen for the woodwork of these rooms and the wall-papers are tan. The fireplace is red brick with a well designed and handsome mantel. In the dining-room a group of casement windows occupies the entire length of one side, the walls are wainscoted to the level of the door height, and the buffet is unusually attractive in design. This room, also the living-room, has heavily beamed ceilings, the former having a "cabin" ceiling, which makes a very distinctive feature.

The bedrooms, which are on the opposite side of the living-room, are well arranged, both being of a convenient size. The room at the rear is almost a sleeping-porch, having windows on three sides. Many persons prefer this modification of the sleeping-out idea.

White enamel is the wood finish in the bedrooms and the walls are papered with dainty light-colored French papers. The closets are large and each has a window.

The bathroom, also finished in white enamel, is larger than one expects to find in a house of this size. It has a built-in seat, linen press and medicine case, with a plate glass mirror on the door.

As can be seen by the illustration, the exterior is particularly attractive. Redwood shakes are stained dark brown, the finished woodwork painted white, and the rough woodwork stained to match the shakes. The flat-pitched widespreading roof is of composition, dark gray in color. The details of the porch beams and the heavy rafter ends are interesting and give a decided touch of character to the exterior.

Simplicity and convenience are happily combined with good taste in the design of this house. The dark brown woodwork, while subdued in color is brightened by the white of the windows, as well as by the brilliant coloring of the flowers and vines, and on the whole it is a delightful example of the unpretentious type of home.

Although the roofing expense is doubled in a house that "spreads" itself over the ground, the saving of strength and time for the housekeeper should be considered as a practical offset when there is no maid-of-all-work to take the countless steps necessary in each day's regime of cooking and cleaning. And there is a cozy appeal in the stairless house that wins the majority of home-lovers of modest means.

GERTRUDE APLETON LUCKEY.

A plan that is out of the ordinary

*7. Briefly describe the present physical appearance of the property, including condition, boundaries, related features, surroundings, and (if appropriate) architectural style.

This one and one-half story turn-of-the-century residence has some Colonial Revival design elements and is four bays wide. Irregularly configured, it has a side facing main gabled roof, a front facing gabled entrance, a gabled dormer and a side partial tent roof. Its Colonial Revival elements include the engaged pilasters at the entrance and the closed pediment above. It exhibits a variety of broken volumes, shapes and roof planes associated with late nineteenth century designs. Clad in wood, it has clapboard with cornerboards, random shingles and machine shingles on the side. The projecting entrance has a door flanked by double-hung windows, plain articulated pilasters and a sliding, aluminum window on the side. Above the plain frieze, the closed gable is finished in random shingles. The central bay has a projecting pair of double-hung windows with wrought iron grilles. A wood stair leads to a pair of off-set doors and windows in the tapered, gabled dormer. Behind the stair is another pair of similar windows. The far side of the house has a polygonal bay with paired windows and a tent roof. The various roofs are finished in composition shingles.

- *19. Briefly discuss the property's importance within the context. Use historical and architectural analysis as appropriate. Compare with similar properties.

This one and one-half story residence is an eclectic example of late nineteenth century construction, of which there are approximately 15 other structures in the survey area built between 1875 and 1900. Constructed earlier than most other buildings in the 300 block of Adena, this house is one of the three structures on the block built before 1900. Tax assessor records estimate the construction date as 1890. Since its construction predates annexation of the area by the City of Pasadena in 1904, no original building records are available. The first record of the property is in the 1906-07 Assessors Field Book which documents a ten room house owned by Nellie C. Dorr. An earlier resident of the house was Joseph Mendenhall in 1900. Dorr and her family lived in and owned the house from as early as 1905. After her husband's death, Mrs. Dorr continued to own and occupy the house until at least 1935. Alterations have included the division from three to four apartment units in 1928, a porch enclosure in 1939, and the conversion into seven units in 1956. For further information and analysis, see the historic context statement for Area 26.
