Mark, Why the rush to vote for a conclusion? I can understand getting the results of the voting numbers but those were available soon after the election. What I want to know is what about all the legal aspects of the Forming Committee of the Mayor. You told me that final reports of the financing records wouldn't be finished until near the end of January. I have many more questions to ask about how the donations were obtained and spent as well as who presented the information in the mailers? Also I want to know how the mail in ballots were sent out to the public and what the complete return numbers were. There seems to be more information about this election that needs further clarification before the process is completed. I'm certainly not sure that all questions have been answered re-guarding this process and why weren't you advising me when I started asking you questions soon after the election? I certainly don't want to be shut out of asking questions that could be material factors on the election process? So if tonights vote only counts the numbers on each Measure I and J, please leave open any other issues, then take your vote.
Richard

Mark, I haven't heard back from you yet on my earlier email with concerns of what tonights vote has on the complete process of certifying the voter numbers. There are many clarification as to how the citizen were informed about these measures. Even now measure J is not understood by anyone from the public and those who voted because of what was expected were the same folks who put Measure I over the top. It's time to wait and give us a better understand of what really took place with this vote. My request for the mayors email address was returned even though I sent a request yesterday to his representative.

Richard
