Comments	If the Assistant City Manager can't handle the technology of teleconferencing with current staffing then hire the people that can on a temporary basis. There are several private companies that provide this service to government agencies. The standing committees of the City Council need to return to a regular meeting schedule.

Comments	I am strongly opposed to this agenda item. First, it makes no sense - if the city is able to schedule and teleconference some meetings, it's capable of scheduling and teleconferencing all regular meetings. And during this emergency, we need our elected representatives working FULL TIME. And if the city staff is finding it difficult to master the technical demands of keeping a full schedule, the city certainly can hire a consultant to set everything up. Or maybe it can call the PUSD, which is holding all of its classes remotely. The city already spends thousands on other consultants, including one to give twice-yearly seminars to the Northwest Commission. Finally, it is also ludicrous to allow the Health Department to have a Friday off during a public health emergency. This attitude is one reason, I believe, that Pasadena has recorded more deaths from COVID-19 than the entire of Orange County.

Comments	I find it hard to comprehend why the city is willing to invest $450k on a camera and then can't seem to have adequate ITD to deploy teleconferencing of city meetings. After four council meetings and 12 council committee meetings have been cancelled, there is good portion of the community anxious to find out many answers to questions that are posed at City Council and rely on public visibility to do so.

Number 2

Comments It is about time that the City Council figures out how to hold weekly meetings; we have been in lockdown for going on seven weeks now, and Pasadena has had more deaths in our community than all of Orange County. It is shocking and shameful to me that you have continued to make excuses for not meeting during arguably the greatest public health crisis this city has seen in one hundred years, and, frankly, it looks as if the literal lives of Pasadena residents are less important to you than the vague irritation of figuring out a way to work remotely -- something that countless other Americans have managed to do over the last seven weeks. I applaud Councilmember Gordo's op-ed in April 30's edition of the Star News regarding this issue -- and I remind the rest of you that there is an election coming this November. If you do not care about our lives, perhaps at the very least you care about your re-election.
