Comments:

What is the city doing to advocate for the Pasadena kids at the state level? We are at day 331 of zoom. Pediatricians all over California are calling for schools to reopen now and not next month. These doctors are seeing really alarming issues with kids and teens which I am sure I do not have to lay out for you. You may or may not be aware but cities like San Francisco are suing their school district for not opening and having a plan. Is there more our city can do? If we know how to keep schools safe as Dr. Goh states, why can't we at least advocate for schools that are capable and wanting to open if it can be done safely? How come pediatricians in our community are being ignored? I don't understand.
